REBEL GRIDDERS PICK UP FIFTH WIN OF SEASON

—DEFEAT HALL-DALE 26-6

Unbeaten Telstar Regional High School wasn't bothered by a driving rainstorm and spongy field while running up a 26-6 win against Hall-Dale High in a Mountain Valley Conference football game at Farmington last Saturday.

The visiting Rebels upped their seasonal record to 5-0 as the Bulldogs skidded to a pair of wins and three losses.

Although outweighted, the undefeated Rebels more than lived up to advance notice by putting pressure on Hall-Dale all the way. Telstar's aggressive defensive line outfought their Hall-Dale counterparts and continually broke Bulldog running plays.

The winning Rebels notched a 6-0 lead in the first quarter when quarterback Pete Blake fired a 30-yard scoring pass to freshman end Al Seames to cap a 60-yard march. An attempted conversion failed. It took Telstar only eight plays to score after taking the opening kickoff.

Workhorse halfback Doug Brooks put Telstar in position to score a second touchdown in the first quarter, intercepting a pass and returning it to Hall-Dale's 30. Four plays later, fullback Paul Farrar crashed five yards for the six points.

Hall-Dale also scored late in the period after Bob Briggs returned the kick-off to Telstar's 30. Halfback Steve Smith gained most of the running yardage to the one from where he scored. A pass for the conversion failed.

Telstar puts its undefeated 5-0 record on the line at Jay Saturday afternoon, when they meet the Tigers with an identical record.

Telstar 12 6 0 8-26

COMMENTS FROM THE OFFICE OF THE TOWN MANAGER

Avery Angevine, who has served one three-year term as selectman and assessor and was re-elected to another last March, submitted his resignation to the chairman of the Board of selectmen. His resignation became effective Oct. 1. Mr. Angevine expressed regret but felt his work demanded his full attention.

The Planning Board met Wednesday night. Their primary objective, for the present, will be to formulate a preliminary plan for solid waste disposal. This must be completed previous to Jan. 10, 1973. Another meeting will be held Oct. 26, when suggestions will be presented as to the various methods of disposing of solid waste.

There is to be a closed circuit radio program for municipal officers explaining the Federal Revenue Sharing Funds. This is to be held Friday of this week at three locations in the state. There has been very little information provided on the subject. There is a possibility some of the funds will be available prior to Dec. 31.

Affected were all customers on the Gore Road to the Greenwood town line and those on the Rumford Road as far as Milton Plantation, a total of 56 phones. The New England Telephone Company's Lewiston-to-Rumford toll cable, which is located in the same trench, was also hit but none of the working lines in it were damaged.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY MEETS — HEARS REPORTS OF ACTIVITIES

The monthly meeting of the Bethel Historical Society, held on Oct. 5, and presided over by President Edward Quinn, received a progress report on the Dr. Moses Mason House by Sidney Davidson of the Bingham Fund. He stated that the target date for its dedication is Mollycokett Day, 1973.

President Quinn reported on the recent Second Home Coming, noting that it was not blessed by the best of weather conditions, but that members of the railroad tour saw a good bit of Bethel, and enjoyed the hospitality. The appreciation of the Society members to everyone who helped was noted, and especially to Mrs. Cecil Conrad who opened her home for a successful silver tea, donating the proceeds to the Society, and to Helen Morton and Sue Wight who assembled a very interesting exhibit of art by people in this area.

A further report was also given on results of the recent membership pledge drive among local business and professional people.

President Quinn announced the committees for the coming year as follows:

Greeting and Welcoming: Mrs. Clare Smith and Carroll Valentine.

Furnishing Museum: Mrs. Cecil Conrad, Mrs. Elizabeth Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Eddy, Mrs. Christine Grover, Mrs. Robert Marshall, Mrs. Sue Fiske, Mrs. Carroll Valentine.

Education and History: Mrs. Cathy Newell and Paul McGuire.

Membership: James Alger, Floribel Haines, Leona Lurvey, Ernest Holt, Guy P. Butler, Kimball Ames, Burnie Morrill, Carroll Valentine, Sarah Stevens, Steve Wight, and all members of the Society are ex-officio members of this committee.

Dr. Moses Mason House: J. T. Grover, trustees and officers.

Program: Mrs. Christine Grover, Mrs. Floribel Haines, and Mrs. Barbara Merrill.

Publicity: Mrs. Elizabeth Carter and Sam Bigelow.

Dr. Davidson introduced Mr. Murdoch of New York, who is the landscape architect in charge of planning and arrangement of the museum grounds. He stated that shrubs and plants indigenous to this region

AUTUMN FESTIVAL FOR SENIOR CITIZENS

The gorgeous weather and the gracious hospitality of the Women's Guild of Our Lady of the Snows Church gave a festive air to the October meeting of the Senior Citizens on Tuesday. Arrivals at Garland Chapel were greeted by Mrs. John Willard.

A social hour preceded the meeting, opened with Joan Coolidge leading a patriotic and religious ceremony. Doris Lord was at the piano and Rev. James H. Nason, minister of the day, Mrs. Lois Ver-rill of Freeport was a welcome guest.

Long tables were gay with fall decorations and tempting foods. Honored birthdays for the month were William Young, Ranald Stevens, Jesse Perry, Maud Hunt, Nell Valentine, Myrtle Lapham and Katharine Wilson. Dorothy Abbott made the birthday cake.

Touring photography students, James Cannon and Robert Baillargeon, of Conestoga College, Ontario, were luncheon guests.

The efficient kitchen and waitress committee consisted of Nellie Frankiewicz, Bea Favreau, Jackie Gauthier, Jean McGuire, Sudie Vachon and Carolyn Brooks.

Accepting an invitation from our popular librarian, Virginia Keniston, the seniors adjourned to the Bethel Library for an amazing demonstration of the Talking Book Machine and Visual Aids.

When the minimum maintenance would be kept in mind, in selecting the material used.

Mrs. Grover, secretary, read a very interesting letter from Mr. Peavey of Tullahoma, N. H., who recently brought to the Society a friendship quilt given as a farewell gift many years ago by Bethel ladies to a minister of the West Bethel Free-Will Baptist Church, named Whitney. Mr. Peavey accompanied by his sister, brought the quilt to the Grovers and in the letter recounted their impressions of Bethel which they had not visited previously, and made the comment "someone must love Bethel very much to restore at great expense the old home to be your Society museum."

The Jackson Silver Post and Unit No. 12 of the American Legion and Auxiliary will be having their membership supper at the Legion Home Thursday evening, Oct. 19, at 6:30. All members are urged to attend. Auxiliary members are asked to bring a hot dish or salad. Dues are due. Please get them sent in as soon as possible.

Our most sincere sympathy goes to Mrs. Corn Bennett on the loss of her brother, Willie Morgan, and to other members of his family.

Mrs. Emma Beecroft, New York, spent the week end visiting her brother, Charles Melville, and family.

The open house of the Greenwood Fire Department Sunday was poorly attended perhaps due to the beautiful day and brilliant foliage which attracted many motorists to speed Bethel, N. H., holds services Sunday at 11 a. m. You are invited to attend. Sunday School for pupils up to the age of 20 years is held at the same time.

The subject of the Lesson Service to be read at services this week is "Doctrine of Atonement." The Golden Text is from Psalm 51:20: "Blessed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me."

ile all his acquaintance ered and slanged, ept; for I had longed to see hanged.
We talked to a woman last ek at a special newsmen's eeting whose job on a Maine ly is to make a weekly ment on the flux of politics politics. She belittled her sion because, she attested, had not a deep knowledge politics or politicians as did well known names among mnists.
We informed her that she tainly was not alone, that ther the big name mnists nor indeed even the politicians themselves had any deep understanding of either politics or politicians.

Nor do we claim any such understanding, but we know what we like and we know that as in the verse above from Hilare Bellow's Epitaph on the Politician Himself that not everybody loves a politician even though he say: "I am not a politician, and my other habits are good." But politicians who most often we dislike, most often supply us with humor to withstand their idiocies.
A whole page full of humor was dished up by three statewide candidates in reply to a Maine Sunday Telegram challenge to delineate what if anything they had accomplished for Maine.

Representative William Hathaway, seeking Margaret Smith's Senate position, filled a third of a page in the Sunday paper with a list of his accomplishments, then commented, "I stress the list is by no means complete." Margaret Chase Smith who could probably outpoll summertime as a Maine favorite, wrote: "Yet, I find personally claiming credit for achievement to be repugnant ..." and then proceeded to use her third of a page to mention projects from Washington to Oxford and from Aroostook to York counties
And Congressman Peter Kyros who merely wants to be returned to his Washington job noted: "While I have been able to assist in many areas, an credit which I may have earned really belongs to the people of our state." An obvious pat on the back for a people astute enough to send him to the legislature.

We might remind the politicians that election to office does not necessarily indicate that the people are convinced of the candidate's wisdom, objectivity, or even desirability, some years ago we heard a Texas newsman comment that the only reason anyone voted for Lyndon Johnson was to get him out of the state where he couldn't do any damage. A comment we later heard reiterated in reference to Edmund Muskie:
"We had to get him out of Maine before he polluted the whole blamed state."

So if repetition tends to lend validity we'll quote from Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels: "And he gave it for his opinion, that whoever could make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind, and do more essential service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together."
We haven't seen any evidence to dispute this theory, and must opine that if all the politicians who make claims of accomplishments were to lay their actual accomplishments end to end, they'd only stretch half the length of a Maine housewife's Monday morning clothesline.

Lovewell Pond area in the town of Fryeburg. In a short time he would bring about a change in the lives of the majority of townpeople, resulting also in the ruination of their town of scenic beauty.
By late that afternoon of that unforgettable Tuesday, fire, the force of Nature that can be a friend when controlled, advanced rapidly with the furor of a forty mile gale.
Stately pine trees began to fall along with the old elm landmarks of the town. The fury spread, taking churches, schools, homes and soon the town was in the thralls of a fiery rage that lasted for the next two days. By October 21, about six homes remained to remind onlookers that a serene town had existed in the midst of this devastation. East Brownfield and Brownfield Center lay directly in the midst of the enemy and both areas became a battlefield to conquer the foe.

Dante's Inferno became alive and with furious fervor tried to kill completely the town of Brownfield. It would have succeeded in its conquest but for the indomitable spirit within the people who dwelt in the town. They saw devastation wherever they looked after the rage had subsided. There were no schools, no churches, no town hall, no post office. For many, no homes. Such buildings were necessary for a town to survive. The loss of town buildings along with the vast wooded acres that burned decreased the valuation of the town. The enemy had come to kill but it could not destroy the courage and perseverance that tended to dominate over despair for the people of Brownfield refused to let their town die. In unity they began to make plans.
Word soon spread around that Brownfield people would remain to recreate the tapestry of life in the town that they belonged to and that belonged to them. Hundreds of volunteers came in to help the people that remained and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dugan of the Shepherd's River Farm allowed the Red Cross to make Headquarters there.
There was a job to be done and people working in unity side by side would accomplish the rebuilding of a town that would live on because of their deare and strong will. One hundred forty eight houses had been destroyed, one hundred forty of which were occupied making three hundred sixty three persons homeless. The population when the unfriendly fire paid its visit to Brownfield was seven hundred fifty. About a hundred people left the town to seek earning a living elsewhere many of them with the hope that one day they would return to live and rebuild a new home.

Officers were set up and salvaging operation became the leading industry. Town officials were busy making

Post Office was set up in the home of Charles Harmon and Mrs. Julia Wells served as Postmistress. The Select man's Office was temporarily located in a baggage compartment of a car loaned by the Maine Central Railroad. A remodelled passenger car served as a diner and Henry K. Lauzon of Derry, N.H. did a thriving business.
A ceaseless struggle was engaged in that the town of Brownfield might live again.

livelihood was swept away with the fire, but the strength, hope and courage of Brownfield inhabitants refused to be defeated.

Gradually new homes were built and some lived in tin houses that the Red Cross had donated to the town.

Ten years after the fire, the perseverance of the people was brought before the public when the new consolidated school, a seven hundred fifty thousand dollar structure, was opened with special ceremonies. Mr. and Mrs. Roger Dunn donated the ground on which the new school was erected. At this historic occasion, other incidents of the town's rebirth were related. Selectman Fred Walker told how many friends in the state of Maine helped Brownfield build a church, how the Red Cross aided residents in building new homes, how a fire company was formed and a station built and how a library and Masonic Hall were constructed through the efforts of the town's people.

Even with new buildings being erected, the toll the fire had taken could still be seen. The mountain known as Burnt Meadow, which in ancient times was volcanic, in present times stood lifeless with trees stretching their charred arms forth in the midst of a barren wasteland. Industry departed with the tragic fire and refused to return to Brownfield, yet hopes were not dimmed. Some began chicken raising businesses, others began dairying and farming and some sought jobs in surrounding areas where work was offered.

About two years after the school was erected, green began appearing on the mountain and season by season new life thrived until the fire swept mountain area trees were surrounded by living pines, hemlocks and birches. The mountain itself would not yield completely to the enemy.

Today, twenty-five years later, the future does not look hopeless and bleak as it did on that tragic day in 1947.

Former residents are returning to town, some now old enough to retire, new families are taking up residency, and young people are getting married and building their homes in the town of their birth.

In February 1971, a dream of many years was fulfilled for the town of Brownfield. Burnt Meadow Mountain Ski Area was opened to the public on February 5. The mountain that had been scarred by fire now offers a winter delight to skiers with twenty-eight acres of trails, and features three trails for the beginner to expert skiers. It is a family ski area with a T-Bar of 3400 feet long from base to the top of the mountain. Future plans call for a golf course and private developers are planning a motel and restaurant. John Henry, one of the town's newer residents, is in the process of erecting a gift shop to be used as an outlet for town inhabitants to sell their arts and crafts.

One of the oldest houses in town, located in West Brownfield, the section that escaped the fire, which belonged to the Eaton family for more than three generations, has been purchased recently by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Patterson. The old Eaton Ranch sign has been replaced with Patterson's Ponderosa and it is aptly named. The new owners raised cattle during the winter of 1972 and are planning to breed and raise cattle in 1973. Ponderosa Hills, Inc. has now been formed and at Merrill's Corner custom built four season homes will be erected. Work has already begun on the new road required for the project.

After twenty-five years of constant struggle, the town is beginning to thrive. The mountain was the first beginning of new economy for Brownfield. Now in the midst of winter with frigid temperatures, the mountain does not look as barren and cold as it did when devastated by the great fire that lashed the town. If it could speak, it would surely say, "I too have waited a long time for this day. I could not come to you, but have longed that one day you would come to me! I have waited long to give you new found joy, patiently to replace charred moments with new, exciting ones. I admired your courage and endurance as I wore my scars for many years. Now I welcome you."

Fryeburg Fair in 1852

Because Brownfield people and other people that adopted the town as their own had a love affair with the town in which they lived, a place that was near death is completely resurrected and twenty-five years later those who refused to let it die have seen the dawn of a new day!

Maybe other parts of horses were singled out for prizes in those days, but the writer never heard of it. And it makes the slightly vulgar mind wonder what sort of prize would be given for that best shaped portion which the judges might have seen going away?

At any rate, the chairman of the horse exhibit of the fair that year, J. E. Hutchins, went big for entire horses. No other horse got a higher monetary estimate of worth although Robert Bradley of Fryeburg got $3 for the best breeding mare.

The West Oxford Agricultural Society was young in those days, and there wasn't much money for prizes. And $3 was a darn sight bigger in those days than $3 today. Even for horse men.

If family history is secure in the author's mind, J. E. Hutchins was the grandfather of the Harry L. Hutchins who is easing his listeners for many years, later on, ran a general store at Norway, Fryeburg.

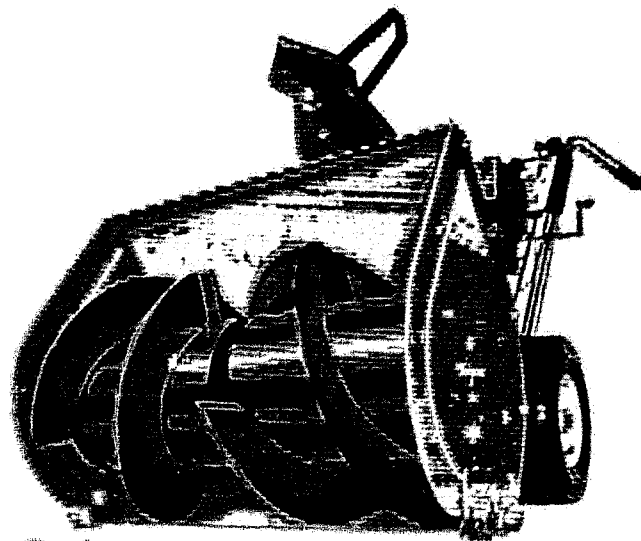

And the report of that 1852 Fryeburg fair is thick with good old family names still prominent in the Fryeburg-Lovell-Brownfield area such as Hutchins, Gilman, Weston, Bradley, Pike, Walker, Hill, Fanning, Osgood, to name a few.

polos by "Scooter" Newton. Helloooooo dere. Easy roll over easy. That's easy does it." The gentle voice of Bill Hutchins is easing his listeners of a deep sleep, a task he performs six days a week at 10 a.m. over WPOR am-fm.

November first, Bill Hutchins will be celebrating his silver anniversary in the "snotty nineteen" who started at Lewiston in his native Lewiston in the late forties. His voice has been heard for six years over Armed Forces Radio.

As a reward for doing his homework, Bill was allowed to go to Rudy Vallee Wednesday nights from eight to ten. Later in his schooling, he started a local radio station playing various high schools ten minutes a week. "I used to write, direct, assign, rehearse the whole show for school." His school was St. Anne's High School, from which he later graduated.

Admiration creeps into Bill Hutchins' eyes as he speaks of his wife Regina, whom he met in Germany and married ten years ago on his previous stint. A secretary in the language department at Bates College, she speaks several languages and takes lessons in German and French. "When we were first married, she used to read and check words and questions. I'd ask her a bit. It wasn't a big deal after we were married, but an English dictionary, read Tolstoy's The Idiot, she's a very clever woman."

Best of the "gang" as he calls them are Simone, and their two sons, Danny, and Andy 6. "I like to have a private life with my gang, but we are very close. We pick our apples in the fall. We have to like each other... that simple. It's very intimate in our house. We decide what we're going to do. We've learned to live with them. wasn't as big as the fair just closed, for seven days, to 7, and there many exhibits nor a crowd, probably. was plenty of entertainment and that made the fair burgeon until it had been one of the state.

Information about this fair won its prizes, and the exhibits there derived largely from the volume picked up in the market. This is a sound report titled "The Fryeburg Fair of 1852," published in the Maine Farmer for 1850, '851 Part II, printed in by William T. Frye to the State.

These reports of the first fair in the state was the Oxford fair of 1850. The Fryeburg fair just closed as the 122nd fair would figure in the third Fryeburg fair of 1852. It was the case of the fair, and ran for two weeks, 21 and 22. The show and fair, held in connection with the annual meeting of the town, which among other measures were taken for the admission of the fair to the privileges of the West Fryeburg fair chosen in that year 1852 were as follows:

Edward L. Osgood, Fryeburg, president; Isaac Spring, Brownfield, vice president; Reuel Barrows, Fryeburg, corresponding secretary; Thomas Souther, Fryeburg, recording secretary; Samuel Stickney, Brownfield, treasurer.

Trustees were James Hobbs, Jr., Fryeburg; Isaiah Warren, Fryeburg; Elden Barker, Lovell; E. T. Nutter, Stow; Gilbert Smith, Denmark; Ichabod Warren, Brownfield; William Woodbury, Sweden; John P. Hubbard, Hiram; L. F. Cummings, Porter; Isaac Spring, of Brownfield, was chosen a member of the Board of Agriculture.

This copy of the Transactions of the Agricultural Societies were, according to the title page, arranged from official returns, by E. Holmes, secretary of the Board of Agriculture.

Eighteen classes were reported by the committees of the Fryeburg fair. Prizes weren't large—there were limited funds. Indeed, the report of the committee on domestic and fancy articles contained this comment from Chairman A. K. Barrows:

"We were under the necessity of passing by many very deserving articles, as the limited amount placed at our disposal prevented any further appropriations.

He then added a note of practicality:

"We would respectfully suggest to all future contributors, that we think the objects of the society would be better promoted by endeavoring to show decided utility as well as taste, in all the productions of home industry, rather than the mere display of a great amount of labor."

Mr. Barrows apparently felt that some more solid production could be dreamed up than embroidered suspenders and worsted flowers.

Because of the comparison of types of exhibits, the prizes offered, and the familiar family names in the prize lists, the reports of the committees would seem to be of interest to younger generations of a wide area.
